Forced to leave His wife, Annie, is straight as a die, and has a heart of gold. A former college chum makes a business proposition to Howard which requires $2,000 cash, and Howard is broke. Robert Underwood, who made love to Annie in his col-lege days and was repulsed, and was ce engaged to Howard's stepmother, Alicia, is a welcome visitor at the Jefries home. Underwood has apartments in the Astruria, an exclusive apartment house. Howard recalls a $250 loan to Underwood that remains unpaid and decides to ask him for the $2,000 he needs. Mrs. Jeffries, Sr., prepares for a great reception at her home. Mrs. Jeffries, sr., foolishly encourages a dangerous intimacy with Underwood which the latter takes advantage of until he becomes a sort of social highwayman. Discover-ing his true character, Mrs. Jeffries, sr., denies him the house, but receives a note from Underwood threatening suiunless she revokes her sentence of banishment. She demands from Underwood a promise that he will not take his life, pointing to the disgrace that would attach to herself from being associated with a suicide. Underwood refuses to promise unless she will renew her patronage. This she refuses to do, and takes her leae. Underwood turns out the lights, places a pistol at his temple, and fires. The report of the pistol awakens Howard from his drunkeu slumber. He stumbles over the dead body of Underwood. Realizing his seriour predicament he starts to leave the room and is met by Underwood's valet. Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Fifteen minutes passed without a word being spoken. There was deep sflence in the room. It was so quiet that once could have heard a pin drop. Had a disinterested spectator been there to witness it, he would have been at once impressed by the dramatic tableau presented-the dead man on the floor, his white shirt front spattered with blood, the cringing, frightened boy crouching in the chair, the towering figure of the police captain sitting sternly eyeing his hapless prisoner, and at the far end of the room Detective Sergeant Maloney busy sending hurried messages through the telephone.

"What did you do it for?" thundered the captain suddenly.

Howard's tongue clove to his palate He could scarcely articulate. He was innocent, of course, but there was something in this man's manner which made him fear that he might, after all, have had something to do with the tragedy. Yet he was positive that he was asleep on the bed all the time. The question is, would anybody believe him? He shook his head pathetically. "I didn't do it. Really, I didn't."

"Shut your mouth! You'e lying. and you know you're lying. Wait till the coroner comes. We'll fix you." Again there was silence, and now began a long, tedious wait, both men retaining the same positions, the captain watching his prisoner as a cat watches a mouse. Howard's mental anguish was almost unendurable. He thought of his poor wife who must be waiting up for him all this time, wondering what had become of him. She would imagine the worst, and there was no telling what she might do. If only he could get word to her. Perhaps she would be able to explain things. Then he thought of his father. They had quar-

I have in my possession a precaription for nervous debility, lack of vigor, weakened man hood, failing memory and lame back, brought on by excesses, unnatural drains, or the follies of youth, that has cured so many worn, and nervous men right in their own homes—without any additional help or medicine—that I think every man who wishes to regain his manly power and virility, quickly and quietly, should have a copy. So I have determined to send a copy of the prescription free of charge, in a plain, ordinary sealed envelope to any man who will write me for it.

This prescription comes from a physician who has made a special study of men and I am convinced it is the surest acting combination for the cure of deent manhood and vigor failure ever

Summoning up all his courage, he said boldly:

"You are detaining me here without warrant in law. I know my rights. I am the son of one of the most influential men in the city."

"What's your name?" growled the "Howard Jeffries."

"Son of Howard Jeffries, the bank-Howard nodded.

"Yes."

The captain turned to his sergeant. "Maloney, this feller says he's the son of Howard Jeffries, the banker." Maloney leaned over and whispered something in the captain's ear. The captain smiled grimly.

"So you're a bad character, eh? Father turned you out of doors, eh? Where's that girl you ran away with?" Sharply he added: "You see I know

"I've done nothing I'm ashamed of," replied Howard calmly. "I married the girl. She's waiting my return now. Won't you please let me send her a message?"

The captain eyed Howard suspiciously for a moment, then he turned to his sergeant:

"Maloney, telephone this man's wife. What's the number?"

"Eighty-six Morningside." Maloney again got busy with the telephone and the wearying wait began once more. The clock soon struck two. For a whole hour he had been subjected to this gruelling process, The latter discovers the body, raises an and still the lynx-eyed captain sat there watching his quarry.

If Capt. Clinton had begun to have any doubts when Howard told him who his father was, Maloney's information immediately put him at his ease. It was all clear to him now. The youth had never been any good. His own father had kicked him out. He was in desperate financial straits. He had come to this man's rooms to make a demand for money. Underwood had refused and there was a quarrel, and he shot him. There was probably a dispute over the woman. Ah, yes, he remembered now. This girl he married was formerly a sweetheart of Underwood's. Jealousy was behind it as well. Besides, wasn't he caught red-handed, with blood on his hands, trying to escape from the apartment? Oh, they had him dead to rights, all right. Any magistrate would hold him on such evidence.

"It's the Tombs for him, all right, all right," muttered the captain to himself; "and maybe promotion for Republican Vote Is Solid and 14 Democrats Vote for the Bill's Passage.

COURT OF COMMERCE PRESIDENT'S HOBBY

Washington, D. C., May 11 .- Fourteen Democrats voted with the solid Republican majority in the house in favor of the administration railroad bill, the vote being 200 to 126. The long and short haul clause of the bill is a radical change from the existing law, and provides that a railroad cannot, without first gaining permission, charge more for a short haul than for a long haul over the same lines. This is designed to prevent the railroads from giving coast cities lower transcontinental rates than the interior cities, and is bitterly opposed by the railroads which maintain that a fundamental law of competitive rate making will be interfered with by such a rule. The interstate commission also is given authority whenever a new rate is proposed to suspend the taking effect of that rate ful. four months so that the commission shall have an opportunity to consider
